

John Branch, 2013 Pulitzer Prize winner, 2012 Pulitzer Prize finalist

Sports writer for The New York Times

Wednesday, April 26, from 9:35 to 10:30. | HUM 312, PubLab

John Branch joined The New York Times in 2005 as a sports reporter. He won the Pulitzer Prize for feature writing in 2013 for “Snow Fall,” a story and multimedia package about a deadly avalanche in Washington State, and was a finalist for the prize in 2012 for his series of stories about Derek Boogaard, a professional hockey player who overdosed on painkillers. Raised in Colorado, he lives with his family near San Francisco.

Tragedy Made Steve Kerr See the World Beyond the Court

The Golden State Warriors coach draws from the assassination of his father to make sense of a complicated world.

By JOHN BRANCH

Dec. 22, 2016

Q. AND A.

Brandi Chastain to Donate Her Brain for C.T.E. Research

Chastain, who scored the winning shootout goal for the United States in the 1999 World Cup final, cited growing concerns over the long-term safety of heading the ball.

By JOHN BRANCH

March 03, 2016

