Kristina Rizga covers education for Mother Jones and is the author of the acclaimed book Mission High. She is a fellow in the Equity Reporting Project sponsored by Renaissance Journalism of San Francisco State University. Prior to Mother Jones, Rizga ran Wire-Tap, an award-winning political and cultural magazine for young adults. She is also co-founder and editor of The Baltic Center for Investigative Journalism, based in her homeland Latvia.

"Rizga delves deep into what is not often shown or known: what’s working. She pulls back the curtain on test scores, painting a vivid picture of what a low-scoring, highly successful school looks like and why test scores shouldn’t matter as much as they do."
