POLITICAL REPORTING SCHOLARSHIP

in honor of

WILLIAM G. FLYNN

This $2,450 scholarship for fall semester 2014 has been established by the family and friends of the late William G. Flynn, a prominent journalist and lecturer in the SFSU Journalism Department. Its purpose is to encourage interest and excellence in political reporting among SFSU journalism students.

Submit the following:

1. Cover sheet with name, student ID #, address and phone.

2. An essay assessing the role of a journalist’s personal views when he or she reports on politics. Include observations from an interview with at least one reporter who covers politics. Maximum 500 words. Double spaced.

Deadline:

Deliver to HUM 305 or email kcox@sfsu.edu by 5:00 p.m. Friday, February 21, 2014.

Eligibility:

The recipient must be enrolled in at least nine units during the fall semester. If a recipient withdraws from the university during the semester, the scholarship must be forfeited.

William G. Flynn was a reporter for 45 years. Prior to working at the San Francisco Examiner, he was bureau chief at the San Francisco office of Newsweek and was a reporter at the San Francisco Chronicle, Reuters and United Press International. He was a part-time lecturer for many years in the SFSU Journalism Department where he taught public affairs reporting.
